

Fiber optic cable junction boxes according to their external structure

Overview

A straight junction box has only one outer hole for the receiving line connection, while a branched junction box has several outer holes for the receiving lines, which can be distinguished according to the number of holes. It serves as a central point for organizing and distributing optical fibers, ensuring efficient connectivity. Riteoptic fiber optic cable joint box provides optical, sealing and mechanical strength of the continuity between adjacent fiber optic cable connection protection device. According to the structure can be classified into the dome (vertical) and horizontal (half) two kinds of cable splice closure. Minimize the interference of the optical cable access signal to the external environment. The Fiber Distribution Boxes (FDBs) are critical components in modern telecommunications infrastructure, particularly in fiber optic networks.
